UPHOLSTERY

>>>

Align A Dutch Modernist influence is apparent in this asymmetrical pattern of vertical and horizontal rectangles and short line sequences, articulated by varying weave structures.

Melody Thin strips made up of horizontal lines are positioned at irregular intervals on a striped formation, in this harmonic composition that pairs negative and positive elements.

Mesh Complementing the five neutral colorways of Align, this textural woven upholstery is constructed with satiny Trevira CS yarns in a pattern reminiscent of architectural mesh.

DIGITAL WALLCOVERING

>>>>

Balance Ruled panels that alternate horizontally and vertically are offset by thin bars, in this wallcovering design that is digitally printed on a reflective Mylar substrate.

Align, ALN 5253

Melody, MDY 5309 & MDY 5307

Mesh, MEM 5277

MAE ENGELGEER Collection

WG Design Studio collaborated with Amsterdam-based textile designer Mae Engelgeer in creating an exclusive collection of upholstery textiles, a sheer drapery fabric, and digital print wallcoverings. Characterized by repetitive geometries of varying scales, Engelgeer's graphic elements and diverse explorations of texture evoke the craftsmanship and authenticity of Dutch Modernism, interpreted through a 21st Century lens. The collection was previewed during the 2016 Salone de Mobile, in Milan, and at NeoCon® 2016, in Chicago.

DRAPERY

Compose The pattern for this sheer drapery fabric alternates wide vertical stripes woven with variegated yarns with silky "ribbons" of varying widths.

UPHOLSTERY

Ritual A matrix of dots, dashes, and negative spaces interrupt an otherwise balanced striped pattern formed by short lines of rayon threads in alternating colors, woven on a soft cotton ground.

Ritual, RIT 5207

Perhaps because of my background in fashion, I tend to think in terms of a collection in my design process. The challenge of finding a color combination or a graphic element that can be used in different ways across a line is very rewarding. The result is a cohesive, contemporary grouping that combines sleek, urban 21st Century design with a sense of craftsmanship and authenticity.
